

- * ACUPUNCTURE is a part of Traditional Chinese Medicine, using thin Acupuncture needles to tap into Energy Channels in our body - that get blocked and cause Health issues.
- * It is not meant as a stand alone treatment - but is useful for many ailments such as back pain.

- * I once did an Acupuncture course at UTS University, where it is a 4 year degree course.
- * I did not choose to make it a career occupation, when I realised that on its own - it had limitations to what Health issues it could be used for. It is really meant to be used in conjunction with other Health practitioners, such as doctors and Herbalists.
- * While I no longer use Acupuncture - I have remembered some useful information - e.g. If I have a sore throat, I use whatever other options I have to stimulate my digestive system. Reason is that the stomach Acupuncture energy channel goes directly to the back of the throat.
- * Interestingly, in western Medicine - the streptococcae bacteria in Tonsillitis or sore throat - is also one of the many bacteria in the Stomach.
- * ACUPUNCTURE can be a welcome alternative to a nagging condition, working within half an hour.
